If any part of any documents listed in Table 1 conflict with this specification, then this specification shall assume priority.

2 - Definitions

The following definitions apply:

- Origin of Player Lands – Location of Town Center.

3 - Background

This Age of Empires II random map recreates the wilderness surrounding the Great Meadows, as they may have appeared in early July 1754 at the opening the French and Indian War. A 22 year old Lieutenant Colonel George Washington –fighting for Britain’s claim to the Ohio country– ordered his Virginian militia to construct a makeshift circular stockade in a meadow at the confluence of the Youghiogheny and one of its tributaries. It was a Fort of Necessity, named thusly, and designed to protect the British colonial regiment from annihilation. A torrential downpour swelled the rivers, flooding the Great Meadows into a vulnerable Great Swamp. With his gunpowder soaked, Washington accepted his enemy’s offer for retreat but inadvertently (through translation error), confessed to “assassinating” a French officer in battle the previous week. Subsequent political backlash to these circumstances erupted into formal hostilities between Britain and France in the Americas.

The name “Youghiogheny” translates from the Lenape language to “contrary flowing stream”, referring to its Northward course (rather than usual southward flow for rivers in that area).
